There is nothing more satisfying than a really good conversation. Those are the times with our friends and family that we always enjoy the most. But have you noticed how we often talk about the same things? How much do we really know about each other? And how often do we think about our own lives in any detail? Sometimes it's good to ask something new.

"If people were to criticize you behind your back, what do you think they would say?"

Some questions in this book are great for self-discovery and personal growth. They will encourage you to think and reflect. They go beyond the surface. They explore the day to day business of life, and they also explore our dreams for the future and our memories of the past. Other questions are simple and fun. But all the questions are answerable and easy to share. They are about real life. Your life, and the people around you.

What do you really know about the people you think you know?

What pets did your mother have when she was a child?

What posters did your friends hang on their bedroom walls?

What did your grandfather do for a living?

Are your friends happy?

- You'll never know, if you don't ask! -

Even simple questions are interesting. We want to hear the answers because other people's lives are interesting to us. However, we don't ask questions because we are afraid we'll seem to be nosy. Yet people enjoy talking about their lives – the problem is they are never asked! It's a social stalemate.

Parents and grandparent often say they want to write their life story. This is an expression of the inner urge to share life's experiences and wisdom. People desperately want to talk – they want to tell their stories. So why not ask them?

This book gives you the freedom to ask questions, and invites people to talk

Face to Face Book can be used anywhere a conversation can be held.
