Editorial Review

About the Author

Ludella Awad, a 16-year-old senior at Albuquerque School of Excellence, has recently published her second book of poetry, Sad Piano Music in Syria. Awad's book, a collection of 45 poems and four interviews with Syrian-born U.S. residents, tells the stories of Syria's tragedy, from the Civil War during the last five years, which has claimed the lives of over 250,000 innocent men, women and children, to the refugee crisis, in which millions of Syrians have been forced to leave their homes and their country. Awad, a Syrian-American born in the United States, published her first book of poetry, Behind the Covers, last spring. In her first book, Awad writes about inner feelings and the masks that human beings wear every day. Because of the escalating crisis in Syria, Awad decided to devote her entire second book to the Syrian national tragedy. Awad, who has been writing since elementary school, says she decided to "share my deep feelings about the horrors and tragic lives lived by the people in Syria every day—through my writings in this book of poems—Sad Piano Music in Syria." Awad, whose parents were born in Syria, is fluent in Arabic and is studying Turkish. Last summer Awad met with nationally recognized novelist, poet and screenwriter, Jimmy Santiago Baca, at the NM Coalition for Literacy and presented him with a copy of her first book, Behind the Covers. In March Ludella made public broadcasting appearances on KUNM Radio and KNME TV. Ludella was a guest on KUNM's Focus on Women radio show in March 26, 2016, with show producer Carol Boss to discuss her perceptions of the Syrian crisis. On March 31 Ludella appeared on KNME's "New Mexico in Focus with show producer Sarah Gustavus to discuss and read from her two poetry books. RUDOLFO ANAYA recently praised LUDELLA AWAD for her second book, SAD PIANO MUSIC IN SYRIA: "In her poems Ludella Awad captures the horrendous suffering of the Syrian people in truthful detail. Her poetic voice is strong and unwavering as she describes the Syrian civil war. In spite of the despair and pain there appear glimmers of hope. --Rudolfo Anaya Awad will graduate next year from Albuquerque School of Excellence and plans to go to college to obtain a degree in fine arts and pursue a career in creative writing or journalism.
